2019 Urbana Sweetcorn Festival Final Report

The 2019 Urbana Sweetcorn Festival was the best Sweetcorn Festival in recent history! Over 25,000 people attend the festival each year and from vendor, beer and corn sales, we believe attendance was up from the past 3 years. The festival hosted over 50 musical artists who played on two stages throughout the entire festival. We are proud to say that our musical entertainment represented a plethora of genres and performances to appeal to the taste of almost any audience. Performances included rock, 90's pop, county, swing, jazz, blues, gospel, DJs and high school marching bands; there was definitely something for everyone! Of course, we can't make this all happen on our own, therefore, we partner with the University of Illinois and Folk and Roots Festival each year and they book much of the programming on both stages during the festival.

Not only did we host musical artists, but we were able to showcase fire performances, swing dance lessons, puzzle hunts, face painting, interactive children's activities that included experimenting with musical instruments, Good Things Urbana canvases and a cooking competition; just to name a few. With ALL of that being said, we cannot forget to mention the more than 90 vendors who participated in the festival by offering locally made cuisine, art, handmade crafts, martial arts, robotics, original clothing and jewelry designs, and skin and hair care products. The festival is just beaming with pride that we can offer an outlet for local the entrepreneur and artistic spirit to thrive in our community.

Last but not least, we can't forget to mention the hot, sweet and buttery corn that some may even consider the method of eating an ear of corn an artform in itself!

All of this would not have been possible without the Arts Grant Funding. We estimated that over the course of a year and between two staff that over 1,000 hours are put into planning executing the festival each year but we don't mind! It's always worth it in the end to see our community having fun and the smiles on their faces.
